

The Will of John Cornelious Big III

I, John Richard Big III, do hereby declare that in the instance of my death my estate shall be divided in the following manner.

- My former wife shall live on the estate grounds until she begins a new relationship. When a new relationship begins, she is required to leave the estate immediately.
- The estate shall revert back to my parents or my brother if my parents choose to do so.
- The current employees shall remain on staff. If the house is sold by a buyer outside of the family, the staff contracts are to be included with the sale. If any of the staff were to be terminated without probable cause, they shall receive compensation equal to 20 years of pay.
- The remaining balance of the family account and all assets that belong to me shall be divided equally amongst my children and all family members residing within the house.
- Any will recipient who agrees to these terms must take an equal burden in accepting any debts or burdens of John Richard Big III.
- Once debts and burdens have been accepted and agreed upon, then all financial amounts and assets of value will be revealed and divided equally. Until then all assets will be held in trust until time of reveal.
- Once these terms are accepted any attempt to legally dispute these terms will result in all remaining assets transferring to Will, while all debts and burdens will remain with previous will beneficiaries.
- This will becomes active in the death, or pronounced death, of John Richard Big III and will remain permanently active from the point of activation forward for the protection and benefit of the will recipients.

I, of sound mind and judgement, do hereby understand and declare that these are the conditions of my living will.
